"EL AGUILA" PRAISED
BY WAYNE MOORE

Wayne Moore

The musical play, "El Aguila," presented last week by the Redlands Mexican colony in the patio of the House of Neighborly Service, might well prove the nucleus for the Little Theatre idea among the Mexicans or other foreign colonies throughout Southern California, was the opinion of Wayne Moore, president of the Little Theatre Federation of Southern California, a guest Saturday of Bruce McDaniel, author of the play, and an interested spectator of the production. At Laguna Beach, Moore said, the Little Theatre productions do not begin to attract the number of people who crowded into the House of Neighborly Service patio for "El Aguila," or who regularly attend the Redlands bowl for sings or concerts.

The play will be repeated at Beaumont on Friday night.
